

The Federal Communications Commission has an obligation to the American people to ensure that media outlets are not monopolized in geographic areas. Cross ownership of media that concentrates the power is simply not in the best interest to the American public for the fair dissemination of information. The FCC has an obligation to the American people that takes priority over a cozy relationship with the media power brokers. You have a responsibility to act on behalf of the public not cater to the selfish desires of wealthy media moguls.